

HIROSHIMA KAGURA PERFORMANCE

~ Hiroshima Prefectural Citizen's Culture Center ~

Japan's Kagura

Kagura is a ceremony that conveys a feeling of gratitude for the bounty of nature. The ancestors of the Japanese people believed that everything that happened in the world was because of the gods. Therefore, in fall, harvested crops were offered in a holy place, preparations for festivals were completed, and the ceremony conveying gratitude to the gods came to be called "Kagura".

So, at the same time that Shinto Shrines were built around the country, Kagura spread as well, was continued by the Shinto priesthood and the local people, and has been preserved and passed on as a present day Japanese folk art in various places and forms.

The special characteristics of Hiroshima Kagura

The Kagura you will see today is called "Geihoku Kagura"(Northern Hiroshima) and has been preserved and passed along in Hiroshima Prefecture through approximately 150 groups. Furthermore, numerous competitions have been held and at present, it is the type of Kagura gathering the most attention.

Though the performers have to study and work, they attend practice two to three times a week and perform at festivals and events on the weekends.

Things to watch for

Please look carefully at the costumes with various embroideries on them.

The heavier ones can weigh up to 20 kg.

You will be able to take a close look after the performance during the commemorative photo session.

The Kagura musical accompaniment is performed by four Japanese instruments. However, there is no sheet music of the sounds. This is to ensure that every group's "sound" and "rhythm" are heard by the ears, remembered by the body and passed on.

The demon of Tsuchigumo (Earth Spider) lived deep in the mountain of Katsuragi, which overlooked Yamato. Tsuchigumo challenging Minamoto no Raiko, the head of the samurais who protected the capital. The Tsuchigumo attempted to avenge the long history of humiliation and to seize power. At that time, Raiko was ill in bed and sent his maid, Kocho, to a doctor for some medicine. The Tsuchigumo knew this and killed Kocho, who was on her way back, carrying the medicine. He changed the medicine for poison and attempted to make Raiko take it. Just as Raiko was about to take it, he sensed that something was wrong, and with a famous sword named “Higekiramaru”, he slashed at the Tsuchigumo now disguised as Kocho. The wounded demon fled back to his home in Mount Katsuragi Raiko renamed his treasuresword “Hizamaru” to “Kumokiramaru (literally Spider killing sword)”, and gave it to his four strongest retainers. They chased the demon to Mount Katsuragi and after a fierce battle defeated him.
